The Persian, the Sun and the Cloud.

By JOHN GAY.

With rervant zear the Persian moved.

Thus the proud calumny reproved:

"It was that God who claims my prayer,
Who gave theo birth, and raised thee there,
When e'er lits beams the vell is thrown.

Thy substance is but plainer shown:
A passing gale, a puff of wind,
Dispels thy thickest troops combined."

The fale arose, the vapor tossed.

The stort of winds, in air was lost:
The stortous orb the day refines:
Thus envy breaks, thus merit shines.
